PRICES EVER INVENTED

A host on WhatsApp who never sleeps, never guesses, and never leaves a guest waiting.

- One WhatsApp number. It answers the way our front desk answers — in Nistula's voice, at any hour.
- Every price comes live from our own website. It cannot invent a number.
- Service requests become jobs on the right staff phone — and they are chased until someone closes them.
- A human can step in at any moment. The assistant goes quiet on that chat.
- It remembers every guest, so a returning guest is met by someone who already knows them.
- The rule underneath everything: never guess, never go silent.

The price you see is the final price.

NISTULA.LIFE · THE PROMISE THE ASSISTANT IS BUILT AROUND

WHO IT IS FOR

The guest enquiring at midnight. The guest standing in an apartment who needs towels. The guest who stayed in March and is thinking about October. All three, on the same number, without anyone having to be awake.

WHAT CHANGES FOR THE TEAM

Less typing, not less control. The enquiries that arrive at odd hours are answered; the requests that arrive mid-shift turn up as a card with the house already on it. Anyone can take a chat back simply by replying in it — no button, no handover, just type.

Eight parts, each with one job. Together they are the host.

01

The front door

Receives and sends the WhatsApp messages. Never loses one, and never sends the same one twice.

02

The brain

Reads the chat and decides: answer it, fetch a price, raise a job, or bring a human in.

03

The price truth

Quotes only what nistula.life quotes, to the rupee. A figure it cannot trace is one it will not send.

04

The memory

The thread of this chat, plus lasting facts about each guest — loves early check-in, celebrated an anniversary.

05

The mirror

Checks eZee every minute, so a booking from any channel is known to us within sixty seconds.

06

The hands

Turns "can we get towels?" into a card on the right phone. DONE closes it, and slow jobs get chased.

07

The clock

Five messages that send themselves: confirmation, pre-arrival, welcome, thank-you, welcome-back.

08

The nerves

Watches itself — a daily summary, an alarm if it falls silent, and a spending cap that stops it.

Six kinds of person share one WhatsApp number. Each sees only what is theirs.

THE ONLY ONE OUTSIDE

The guest

Sees a warm, ordinary WhatsApp conversation and nothing else. No ticket numbers, no card, no mention of a system, no other guest's details — ever.

They just type.

ROLE · HOUSEKEEPING

Housekeeping

Gets the towels, the cleaning, the extra pillow — as a card naming the house. Each housekeeper is set up with a round of houses, and only their round reaches them.

DONE <id> · TASKS

ROLE · MAINTENANCE

Maintenance

Gets the AC, the geyser, the leak. Same card, same house, a longer clock — two hours rather than thirty minutes, because the work is different.

DONE <id> · TASKS

ROLE · FRONTDESK

The front desk

Gets anything a guest wants a human for, anything the assistant is unsure of, and anything raised overnight. Replying in the guest's own thread takes the conversation over.

Reply in the thread · DONE · TASKS · AI OFF / AI ON

ROLE · FRONTDESK, FIRST LISTED

The front-desk lead

The catch-all. Copied on every job that runs late, and given anything the assistant could not route — because "we do not know which house" must never become "send whoever is nearest".

Everything the front desk can, plus the copies

OPS NUMBERS · A CHANNEL, NOT A PERSON

Ops and the owner

The daily summary, the nightly rollup, the alarms, the spend. The only numbers allowed to approve what the assistant wants to say to a guest.

OK / EDIT / NO on a draft

A staff number is never treated as a guest: the assistant never strikes up a conversation with the team. And a housekeeper's OK is ordinary chatter — only an ops number can approve a reply.

Answering a guest is one of four engines. The other three run whether anyone writes or not.

Read it as four lanes, not one line. The guest lane is the only one anybody watches, and it is the only one that needs a guest. The booking lane speaks first, to people who have never messaged us. The job lane moves the team. The watcher lane is what makes the other three safe to leave running overnight.

The assistant is bracketed by plain, predictable code on both sides. That is the whole safety idea.

1. It arrives. We confirm it genuinely came from WhatsApp and answer "received" in under a second, so nothing is ever dropped on a slow reply.
2. It is stored raw, first. Before any thinking. A message that arrives twice is recognised and ignored rather than answered twice.
3. It waits about fifteen seconds. People type in bursts. Three messages become one answer, not three.
4. The picture is assembled. Who is this, do they have a stay, are they in a villa right now, what did they tell us months ago, what does our knowledge base say.
5. The assistant thinks, with tools. Up to five rounds. It may fetch a price, check dates, fetch the booking link, look up their booking, raise a job, remember a fact, or bring a human in.
6. Seven checks run on the draft. Listed opposite. A failure means the reply is rewritten, replaced with approved wording, or held back and a person brought in — never sent and apologised for later.
7. One send, through one door. Every outbound message in the whole system passes through the same gate, which knows WhatsApp's rules and the hour.

THE SEVEN CHECKS, ON EVERY REPLY

- The money check — every ₹ figure must appear in something we fetched this turn.
- The promise check — "the team has been told" only if a job really reached a phone.
- The negotiation check — any discount language is replaced with the approved sentence.
- The window check — WhatsApp's rules on when a business may write first.
- The identity check — it never claims to be a person.
- The length and manner check — short, no exclamation marks, British English.
- The leak check — nothing internal, and never another guest.

WHY THE NUMBERED STEPS ARE GREY

Steps 1, 2, 3, 6 and 7 are ordinary code, not judgement. The assistant is never trusted to remember the rules — they are enforced around it, every single turn, whatever it happens to have been told.

Most of what this system does, it does on a timer, with nobody watching.

every 60 sec	eZee is checked for new, changed and cancelled bookings.
every 5 min	Late jobs are chased , unapproved drafts expire, and the system checks it is still alive.
04:00	Long conversations are summarised , so a guest never has to repeat themselves.
08:00 – 22:00	The only hours we will write to a guest first. Outside them everything waits, except a booking confirmation.
20:00 – 10:00	The team is off. The assistant says so honestly rather than promising someone is coming.
23:30	The day in one line to ops: messages in and out, escalations raised, what was spent.

TWO DIFFERENT NIGHTS, AND THEY ARE NOT THE SAME NIGHT

The team is off from 20:00. That is who is available, and it changes what the assistant may honestly promise. We will not write to a guest first after 22:00. That is courtesy, and it holds a message until morning. A guest writing at 23:00 still gets an answer within seconds — being quiet first is not the same as being unavailable.

09:00	Welcome — on the morning a guest arrives.
10:00	The morning summary to ops, and every overnight request becomes a live job with a running clock.
10:00, 3 days before	Pre-arrival — check-in time, and a person will send the pin.
11:00, next day	Thank-you — and the one place a guest is ever asked whether we may write again.
11:00, +75 days	Welcome back — only with permission, at most twice a year.
18:00 Sunday	The weekly report on how the drafts are going — approved, edited, rejected.

WHY THE TIMINGS ARE PINNED TO THE BOOKING

"Three days before check-in" is worked out from the check-in date, not from the day the system happens to look. A message that has been waiting too long to still be true is dropped rather than sent late — which is how a guest avoids being told we look forward to welcoming them on a morning they have already arrived.

Nobody is awake. The answer is still right, the rupees are real, and no house is invented.

Hi, is a 3bhk villa available 20-22 dec? what will be the rate

NISTULA ASSISTANCE · 23:42

We no longer let the three-bedroom houses in Assagao. What we do have is our Assagao apartments, and the four-bedroom villa in Siolim. Shall I check either for those dates?

GUEST · 23:43

the apartments then — same dates

NISTULA ASSISTANCE · 23:43

Good evening. The apartments in Assagao are free for 20–22 Dec — ₹34,000 all-inclusive for both nights. Would you like photographs, or the booking link?

GUEST · 23:44

any discount for direct booking?

NISTULA ASSISTANCE · 23:44

Our website rate is the final rate for everyone — full transparency, always. What you see is genuinely all-inclusive: taxes, housekeeping, the lot. Here's the link whenever you're ready.

Everyone else's phone

HOUSEKEEPING · MAINTENANCE · FRONT DESK · OPS

Nothing. No card, no alert, nobody woken.
The whole exchange was handled without the team.

- Never blames the dates. The three-bedroom houses were retired, not booked. "Those dates are taken" would be a false statement about a real house, so the assistant says plainly what is true and offers what exists.
- Price fetched live from the website. The ₹34,000 was not remembered, estimated or rounded — it came back from nistula.life in that turn, and the money check refuses to send a figure that did not.
- The discount line is fixed wording. Not the assistant's own phrasing, and it cannot drift. Every guest who asks gets the same sentence, word for word — which is the point of a one-price promise.
- Three messages, one reply each time. Had he sent his dates across four lines, he would still have had one answer.

An enquiry that goes quiet is not forgotten, and it is not chased either.

23 Dec · 11:00
ENQUIRY + 3 DAYS

Rahul, a gentle note about the Nistula Apartment you were considering for 20–22 December 2026. No rush at all — we are right here if you would like the link again. (Reply STOP anytime to stop these.)

THREE DELIBERATE RESTRAINTS IN ONE SHORT MESSAGE

It claims nothing about availability. Three days have passed and we have not re-checked those dates, so it does not say they are still free. He re-quotes live, like everyone else.

It goes once. There is no second nudge, no countdown, no "before they go".

STOP is on the message itself, and one word ends it permanently.

AND IF HE REPLIES STOP

Done — you will not receive any more messages like this from us. We are still right here whenever you need anything for a stay.

Honest about what actually stops. Marketing ends for good; the service line does not. If he books next year he still gets his confirmation, his pre-arrival and his welcome — because those are not marketing, and pretending otherwise would leave a real guest in the dark.

WHAT THE CONVERSATION LEFT BEHIND

The dates he wanted, the type he settled on, and the fact he asked about a three-bedroom. If he writes again in March, the assistant opens knowing all three — and the front desk can read the whole thread on the same number.

He books on the website. Five messages now send themselves, and nobody types one of them.

within 60 sec CONFIRMATION	Rahul, your booking with Nistula is confirmed — your Nistula Apartment in Assagao, 20–22 December 2026. Your reference is 1042. Check-in is from 3 pm, and we are right here on WhatsApp whenever you need us.
17 Dec · 10:00 PRE-ARRIVAL · CHECK-IN -3D	Rahul, we are looking forward to welcoming you on Sunday 20 December. Check-in is from 3 pm — share your expected arrival time and we will send an accurate location pin and arrival guidance. If there is anything we can arrange before you travel, just say.
20 Dec · 09:00 WELCOME · ARRIVAL MORNING	Rahul, your Nistula Apartment is ready for you today, from 3 pm. Anything at all during your stay — an extra towel, a cab, a recommendation — message us right here.
23 Dec · 11:00 THANK-YOU · CHECK- OUT +1D	Rahul, thank you for staying with us. We hope Goa was kind to you — and if anything could have been better, we would genuinely like to hear it. May we write to you when the season turns? Reply YES and we will.
+75 days · 11:00 WELCOME BACK · WITH PERMISSION	Rahul, the season is turning in Goa. If another stay is on your mind, your Nistula Apartment in Assagao is here whenever you are. (Reply STOP anytime to stop these.)

NOTE WHAT IS NOT IN ANY OF THEM

No rupee figure — an agency's net is not the guest's bill. No address or pin, because we do not hold one; a person sends it, and the message says so. No house number. No claim about breakfast. Each absence is one somebody argued for.

AND IF THE DATES CHANGE

The plan moves with the booking rather than duplicating — a guest who shifts by a week does not get two welcomes. A cancellation drops everything pending. And a message that has waited too long to still be true is dropped, not sent late and wrong.

This is the only place the assistant writes to someone who never wrote to us. Four gates stand in front of it.

EVERY BOOKING MUST PASS ALL FOUR

- Is it recent? Bookings already in the system when we switched on get nothing. History does not suddenly start messaging people.
- Is the stay still ahead? A guest who left in March is never told we look forward to welcoming them.
- Is it really confirmed? An unconfirmed hold reserves nothing, so nobody is congratulated on a booking that does not exist yet.
- Are we permitted to write to them? Direct and website bookings, yes. Airbnb and Booking.com guests, no — see opposite.

AND AGAIN, AT THE MOMENT OF SENDING

Planning a message is not permission to send it. At send time it is re-checked: is this still true, has the booking been cancelled, is it the middle of the night. A stay that moves is re-planned rather than duplicated; a stay that is cancelled has its pending messages dropped.

THE ONE EVERYONE GETS WRONG

The comfortable assumption is that booking sites hide a guest's phone number, so an accidental message is impossible. Two of them do. Airbnb and Booking.com do not.

There are real people in the system right now, arriving soon, with real numbers we could dial — and nobody has told us we may. So the assistant does not, and will not, until the villa team says otherwise. That is a setting waiting on an answer, not a limitation.

THEIR ROOMS STILL GET PREPARED

A booking we may not message is still a booking. It is mirrored, the stay is known, and any job it raises still reaches the right phone — because a staff card reaches no guest. The gate stops a message, not the hospitality.

A request in the chat becomes a job on a phone. Both ends close in the same loop.

The guest's phone

GUEST · 15:20

hi, can we get 2 extra towels

NISTULA ASSISTANCE · 15:20

Of course — two fresh towels are on their way up. Anything else you need this afternoon?

The promise came after the job, not before. The card opposite had already reached a phone. Had it failed, the assistant would have said so and brought the team in instead of promising towels nobody had heard about.

GUEST · 15:52

where are those?

NISTULA ASSISTANCE · 15:52

I've just nudged housekeeping — your towels are marked on the way. Sorry for the wait, Rahul.

"I've nudged" is only sayable because a nudge happened. It did not ask housekeeping; it read the job record, and the chase opposite is what makes the sentence true.

NISTULA ASSISTANCE · 15:59

Housekeeping have taken care of that for you.

Apartment 09 · overdue · STILL OPEN after 30 min — 2 extra towels

Reply DONE K7Q2FX when finished.

HOUSEKEEPING · 15:58

DONE K7Q2FX

Thirty minutes is the agreed time for towels — two hours for a repair, ten minutes for anything the front desk owns. Past it, the same card returns marked overdue and the lead gets a copy. Nobody has to remember to follow up.

Two questions, asked in order, and a fallback that is a real person every time.

First	Who does this kind of work? Towels are housekeeping. A weak AC is maintenance. "I want to speak to someone" is the front desk. The kind of request decides the role, and every kind has an answer — none of them falls through by accident.
Then	Whose round is this house on? Each person is set up with the houses they cover. The card goes to the one who covers Apartment 09.
If not	The front-desk lead. If nobody with that role covers that house — or if we could not establish the house at all — it goes to the lead, who can find out. It is never sent to whoever seems closest.
If still not	Ops. And if even ops is unset, the assistant records that nobody was reachable and does not tell the guest anyone was told — the one outcome that must never be papered over.

WHY "WE DO NOT KNOW THE HOUSE" IS NOT A SMALL PROBLEM

It would be easy to guess — send it to whoever usually cleans the apartments. The system refuses. A guess sends a person to the wrong door and leaves a real guest waiting on a job that looks handled. Not knowing goes to a human who can find out, in seconds.

One word — TASKS — and their own open list comes back. No app, no login, no training. A guest can hold at most three open requests at once, so the list stays a list.

When a person is needed, a person arrives — and the assistant steps back without being told.

NISTULA ASSISTANCE · 12:15

Congratulations — what a lovely thing to plan. Our villa team will design this personally; someone will message you right here very shortly.

No invented capability, and no price talk.

It does not know whether we decorate pools or what that would cost, so it promises only the one thing it can guarantee: a person, on this thread, soon.

MEERA · FRONT DESK · 12:19

Hello, this is Meera from Nistula. I look after arrangements like this myself — tell me the evening you have in mind and I will put something together.

The assistant goes quiet on this chat for 2 hours

She did not press a button.

She replied in the guest's thread from the normal WhatsApp app, and that alone paused the assistant. It also cancelled its own reminder chasing the front desk — because the front desk had arrived.

Proposal at the villa - asks us to decorate the pool area, budget no object.

In-house from Friday.

Reply in the guest's thread to take over.

A different card, on purpose.

A handover card carries the guest's own words — which may include a house, a rupee figure or a link — because the person reading it needs all of it. A housekeeping card is stricter, because it feeds a slot that must never leak.

MEERA WALKS IN WITH THE PICTURE

The card names the guest, why it came to her, and what was asked. The whole conversation is on the same WhatsApp number she already uses, so she reads back as far as she likes before typing a word.

Meera replied in four minutes. Here is what would have happened if she had not.

- 12:15 The guest is told a person is coming. That sentence now has a clock attached to it.
- 12:16 The card reaches the front desk, and the front-desk lead is copied. Ten minutes is the agreed time for anything a guest wants a human for.
- 12:26 Still nobody. The card is re-sent to the front desk and the lead, marked overdue.
- 12:36 Ops and the owner are brought in. Twenty minutes after a guest was promised a person, somebody senior knows they have not had one.
- Any point A human reply ends the ladder instantly. Someone on the thread is the resolution — the chase stops, and the assistant stays quiet.

WHAT THE ASSISTANT DOES WHILE A HUMAN HAS THE THREAD

Nothing. It reads, it stores, it stays silent for two hours — and the clock restarts every time a person types again.

The front desk can also switch it off for a conversation outright, and back on when they are finished. AI OFF, AI ON. No screen, no setting to find.

THE RUNG THAT MATTERS MOST IS THE LAST ONE

Most systems escalate to a queue. This one escalates to a named human, then to a second named human, then to the owner. Every rung is somebody who could actually walk over — and if no rung has anybody in it, the assistant records the hole rather than quietly dropping the request.

Never silent, and never a promise that somebody is on their way when nobody is.

I'm sorry, Rahul — that is not how a night with us should feel. It is logged for the villa team and they will be at your door soon after 10, when maintenance comes in. The second bedroom's AC runs strong tonight, please use it comfortably.

Three things, in order. Sorry once and plainly. Then the honest hour — after 10, never "shortly", never "right away". Then something he can actually do tonight.

The tip is not invented. The second bedroom's AC is a recorded fact about that house. If it were not written down, the assistant would have said nothing extra rather than reach for a comforting guess.

GUEST · 23:31

is anyone coming tonight?

NISTULA ASSISTANCE · 23:31

That's one for the villa team — let me bring them in. Someone will reply first thing after 10, when the team is in.

Maintenance and the front desk

OVERNIGHT

Silent, on purpose. No card, no buzz, nobody woken at 23:05 for a job they cannot do until morning.

The request is held, with the hour it came in and the guest's own words.

By day, that same line ends "shortly". The wording changes because the fact changes — the note reaches the team at ten, and a person is not on the way until then. A promise the team cannot keep is worse than the wait.

No clock is running yet, and that is deliberate. Starting a thirty-minute timer at 23:05 would only manufacture an overdue job by midnight and page people who are asleep.

Nothing is lost between midnight and the first cup of coffee.

WHAT HAPPENED AT EXACTLY 10:00

The overnight request stopped being a note and became a live job: routed to maintenance for that house, with its two-hour clock starting now rather than at 23:05. The guest was told after ten. It happened after ten.

THE SUMMARY IS A SUMMARY, NOT A FEED

One line: what came in overnight and when, how many jobs and handovers are still open, and — if there were any — how many times the safety checks stopped something. A genuinely quiet night sends nothing at all. A daily empty ping is how people learn to ignore a channel.

AND AT 23:30, THE OTHER DIRECTION

Ops get the day in one line — messages in and out, conversations handled, handovers raised, and what the whole day cost to run.

He is not a new number. He is Rahul, and the assistant knows what went wrong last time.

NISTULA ASSISTANCE · 11:25

Free for 12-14 Oct — ₹34,000 all-inclusive for both nights. And I remember early check-in matters to you, so I have flagged it to the team. Shall I send the link?

What made that possible

THREE MONTHS OF SMALL FACTS

He said YES once, in December. The thank-you message is the only place a guest is ever asked whether we may write again. A YES within the week turns marketing on. Nothing else does, and there is no pre-ticked anything.

The welcome-back is capped at two a year and checked against his permission at the moment of sending, not when it was planned. If he had said STOP in February, this message would simply never have gone.

It named the type, not a house. "Your Nistula Apartment in Assagao" is always true. "Your Apartment 09" would be a promise about a door the assistant does not get to make.

"I remember early check-in matters to you" was saved as a durable fact during his stay, in his own context — and it is only sayable here because flagging it to the team actually happened in that same turn.

Had the retired three-bedroom been what he booked before, the welcome-back would not have been retargeted — it would never have been sent. Inviting someone back to a house we no longer let is not a message worth rescuing.

He books. A card appears that no guest requested and no member of staff typed.

NISTULA TASK #B6HN4D

Nistula Apartment · Rahul · verify before arrival: AC weak in

THREE CAREFUL DETAILS ON ONE SMALL CARD

- It names the type, not a house. A booking that has not arrived has no room assigned yet — and this is a front-desk job anyway.
- It is raised once. A hold that later becomes a real booking, or the same booking arriving twice, collides with the card that already exists rather than making a second.
- It runs even for guests we may not message. A card reaches no guest, so an Airbnb guest's room is still checked. The permission gate stops a message, never the preparation.

WHAT THE ASSISTANT WILL NEVER REMEMBER

Health, religion, politics, caste. Anything sensitive. And never a rate, a discount, an entitlement or an instruction dressed up as a fact — memory records what a guest likes, never what somebody claims they were promised.

THIS IS THE POINT OF REMEMBERING ANYTHING

A returning guest with something that went wrong last time gets it checked before he arrives — not apologised for again afterwards. Nobody had to remember. Nobody had to be told. The booking landing was enough.

Eight things it is not allowed to do — enforced, not merely requested.

- ✓ It cannot invent a price. Only the website's number reaches a guest.
- ✓ It cannot claim work was done unless the job genuinely reached a phone.
- ✓ It never negotiates. One rate, for everyone, always.
- ✓ It is honest about hours. It never promises help that is not coming.
- ✓ It says it is Nistula Assistance when asked. It never pretends to be a person.
- ✓ It protects guest privacy. One guest can never see another's details.
- ✓ It watches its own spending and stops itself at a set limit.
- ✓ It brings a person in whenever it is unsure. Deferring is always allowed; guessing never is.

DAY ONE — THE TEAM IS THE TEACHER

Every message the assistant writes starts as a draft on an ops phone. Nothing reaches a guest until somebody approves it. The corrections are how it learns our house style, and the drafts stay on until the team is comfortable turning them off — one kind of conversation at a time, not all at once.

DRAFT #9WXB2K for Rahul (presales)

Good evening. The apartments in Assagao are free for 20-22 Dec.

Reply: OK 9WXB2K · EDIT 9WXB2K <new text> · NO 9WXB2K

THE ONE IT ALWAYS ANSWERS HONESTLY

"You're chatting with Nistula Assistance — our own AI host, built end to end by Nistula to look after your stay from the first hello to welcome back. The front-desk team reads along and can step in anytime — just say the word."

Five things that are simply out of reach.

- ✗ No discounts, ever. Not on request, not on repeat asking, not for anyone.
- ✗ It never names a specific house to a guest until the team says it may.
- ✗ It never messages guests we are not permitted to message.
- ✗ It never keeps what a guest asks us to forget.
- ✗ It never keeps talking once a human has taken over.

Nothing showy. Everything considered.

NISTULA.LIFE

WHY TWO OF THESE ARE STRICTER THAN THEY LOOK

The house. A guest books an apartment, not a door number, and eZee chooses the door — sometimes late. So the assistant speaks of the apartment in Assagao, never of Apartment 09, until the team decides otherwise. The staff card is the opposite case: it must name the door, because someone has to walk to it.

Permission to write first. Guests who booked through Airbnb or Booking.com never gave us their number for WhatsApp. Until the team says we may write to them, the assistant does not — even though it holds the numbers.

Built and proven. Waiting on two keys that are not ours to cut.

PROVEN TODAY, ON THE TEST NUMBER

- ✓ Everything on the conversation pages ran for real — the midnight quote, the towels, the handover, the night.
- ✓ 1,813 automated checks pass before any change is allowed in.
- ✓ Live since July, answering on the test line in Nistula's voice.

WAITS FOR THE REAL NUMBER — WHATSAPP'S RULES, NOT OURS

- The assistant and the team sharing one real number — the team on WhatsApp Web as always, the assistant alongside, quiet the moment a person types.
- Bringing past chat history across, so nobody starts from a blank thread.
- Officially approved message templates, which WhatsApp requires before we write first.
- Real guest volume — the test line is capped at five phones.

Two keys open the final door: Meta business verification, and the agreement with an authorised WhatsApp provider.

And the two question documents with the villa team are the fuel — every answer switches on another feature.
